

Listening as a way of Life Seminar

Tuesday 4 November 2008
London

Transforming environments:

Ways of involving young children and adults in changing spaces

'Transforming environments' will explore the possibilities and difficulties encountered in involving both children and adults in changes to indoor and outdoor spaces. The speakers will discuss examples from research and practice in the UK and Europe. This seminar is jointly organised by the National Children's Bureau (NCB) and Roehampton University. We would like to thank the Bernard van Leer Foundation for their support of this event.

This is the first in the 'Listening as a way of life' series: These are theme based seminars which focus on specific aspects of listening to young children, building on the popular set of leaflets produced by the Early Childhood Unit at NCB (www.ncb.org.uk/ycvn).

Registration: 12 noon
Lunch available: 12.30pm
Seminar: 13.30 – 4.30pm

Address: The Old Sessions House, Clerkenwell Green, London, EC1R 0NA
<http://www.sessionshouse.com/index.html>

The cost of the seminar is £50 including lunch

(please note cancellations will not be reimbursed after Friday 24 October)

Email Lucy on lwilliams@ncb.org.uk to book your place.

These seminars are part of the Young Children's Voices Network (YCVN), a national project which supports local authorities in developing good practice in listening to young children to inform policy and the improvement of early years provision. The project is funded by the Department for Children, Schools and Families and run by the Early Childhood Unit, NCB.

